JONES' STORY.

It is Told the President Concerning an Appointment.

Senator John P. Jones, of Nevada, is commonly supposed to spend most of his time these days pondering on the ever-perplexing silver problem. That his ideas on the subject are worthy of grave thought is acknowledged on all sides, and President Cleveland was said to be especially pleased with Senator Jones' able speech at the monetary conference at Brussels. He was anxious that Mr. Jones should continue as one of the American delegates when the conference should reassemble. Senator Jones pleaded a multitude of private affairs, which would prevent him from keeping the place. One morning last April President Cleveland begged the favor of a private interview with the Senator at the White House. The silver advocate from Nevada promptly made an appointment. The President shook hands cordially, and eyed the Senator with that well-known air of diplomacy and tact for which Mr. Cleveland is famous.

"Now Mr. Jones," said the President, not relaxing a whit in his alert attitude of statesman like astuteness, "now, Mr. Jones, I want you to tell me what you think of Mr. So and So whom I have been considering for an important appointment in reference to the silver question."

"Let me ask you one question first, Mr. Cleveland," returned the Senatorial legislator. "Have you appointed him to the place?"

"I have," answered the ready inventor of epigrams.

"Mr. President," said Mr. Jones, "have you ever heard a story of Dennis O'Shaughnessy, who kept a saloon in Buffalo, your native city? One afternoon Dennis went up stairs to put on some new clothes and left his wife in charge of the bar below. Mrs. O'Shaughnessy arranged herself comfortably behind the bar to await customers.

"Pretty soon Patrick Roonan came in, very thirsty, and asked for beer. The matronly barmaid gave him a draught of the foaming liquid.

"Ah-h!" sighed Mr. Roonan, wiping his lips. "Mrs. O'Shaughnessy, please to charge the foive cents!" Mrs. O'Shaughnessy ran to the back stairs.

"Dinnis!" she yelled; "Dinnis, is Pat Roonan good for a glass of beer?"

"Has he drunk it?" responded Dennis from above.

"He has."

"He is."

A vague, puzzled smile flitted across the President's features and he closed his eyes meditatively as Senator Jones bade him a good morning.—Salt Lake Tribune.

Many a good item of news is lost to the newspaper by the modesty of the people who hesitate to tell a reporter of matters concerning themselves, says an exchange. Not that they do not want it to appear in print, but they are afraid they would be pushing themselves forward. That is wrong—from the reportorial standpoint the man who will stop a newspaper reporter on the street and inform him that he has been to Chicago, that he is going to be married, or that his wife entertained friends from a distance is the dearest man on earth. May his like increase through out the world.—Weekly.

The Genoa Courier contains the following sensible item: If you buy flour imported from California, you send your money out of the State. On the other hand if you buy a Nevada brand of flour your money remains in this State, where it builds up the commonwealth, makes times better and business more prosperous, therefore increasing the value of your products and benefitting you. The Riverside Mills at Reno will buy Nevada wheat just in proportion to the amount of flour they are able to put on the market.
